Master Industries Worldwide to Make Masks and Gowns for Health Care Professionals

SANTA ANA, California - As our global community continues to be threatened by the spread of COVID-19, our team at Master Industries will be dedicating manufacturing capacity to producing face masks and gowns that will be made in the United States to fight the spread of the virus.

"Like most non-essential companies when this crisis began, we felt powerless in this situation," Donna McDermott, General Manager of Master Industries Worldwide said. "We saw everything happening around us and wanted to pitch in any way we could. Being a company where 95% of our products are made in the US, we saw an opportunity to do our part to help."

Master Industries is working closely with Coleman Knitting to manufacture these products from the highest quality of materials that are comfortable, protective and durable to maintain their form through washing.

"Supporting our healthcare professionals that are on the frontlines every day is something that we are honored to do and are proud to have the Master brand evolve into something that is now making a positive impact in our communities during this challenging time," McDermott said."

We are actively monitoring the guidance of the World Health Organization (WHO) and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) on the steps we can take to help prevent the spread of the virus and continue to enhance our already strict cleaning procedures. We all have a responsibility to follow the guidance of health authorities, practice good hygiene habits, practice social distancing, and check-in with friends and neighbors throughout this trying time.
